The Vandals followed the example of the Burgundians and invaded Sicily, but in 491 they suffered such a serious defeat that they not only withdrew, but also renounced the tribute Adovacca had been paying them.

Theodoric dispatched a soldier contingent to dissuade the Vandals from Sicily. The defeat of Vandals must have been so decisive that Costanzo (Vandals) renounced both its territorial and financial claims. Thus Theodoric like his grandfather (Vandalin) had become a conqueror of Vandals.
